

The community coaching process visualized

The figure below depicts the three phases of the innovative process of community empowerment that UNDP uses. The document we share mostly focuses on the Mobilization and Participatory Planning phases. In other sections of this newsletter, the reader can find materials on more examples of the coaching process and elements of the final phase, Localization.

The UNDP area-based development approach focuses on empowering people who live in ghettoized settlements, and promotes coordinated interventions at all levels of society. Area-based development is necessary for social transformation, as the basis for the resettlement and social inclusion of marginalized Roma.
